TO THE READER.

In presenting the present Directory to the public of Buffalo, the subscribers have in a measure to ask their indulgence. The difficulties in getting up the names for a Directory in a city like ours, are peculiarly great, and especially when, as is the case with us it is undertaken for the first time. We have become fully sensible of this fact, and consequently hope that the purchasers of our Directory will bear with the errors of omission and commission, which may be found in the list of names. As it is our intention to continue the publication of the Commercial Advertiser Directory annually hereafter, we hope in succeeding years to approach as near correctness as the nature of the work will permit.

Aside from the list of names, we feel confident that we present to the public a more interesting, useful, and comprehensive volume than has over before been offered in the shape of a Directory for this city.

The historical sketch which has been most obligingly furnished by one whose style will readily be recognised without any formal announcement, gives additional value to our volume, possessing as it does full authenticity and corroborated as it must be by all our oldest inhabitants. The description of the view of the harbor in 1825, has also been furnished us by a gentleman, resident here at the time the view was taken, and possesses much interest both as a reminiscence of former times, and as a means of comparison with the very different picture presented at the present time.

The early notices of Buffalo, will also be found full of interest to our citizens, as well as to the casual reader; these have been procured from authentic sources, by a friend, and may be relied on.

We hope in a succeeding year to carry out the suggestion of the writer of the sketch, and with his assistance, and that others to give a full and succinct history of the rise and rapid growth of our city—together with interesting reminiscences of the Indian tribes who once roamed the undisputed masters of this section of country, and who are fast fading from among us.

The statistical matter, is, much of it from the columns of the Commercial Advertiser, and will be found useful and interesting. At the end of the volume will be found an advertising Directory, containing the cards of many of our principal business establishments, hotels, &c. &c.

HISTORY OF BUFFALO.

In the Eastern hemisphere, after rude and warlike hordes had occupied them, centuries were required to populate countries; and hamlets swelling by slow, natural increase, and by the accretions of sluggish commerce, grew into cities as infants grow to manhood, and became great only as they became venerable. The free institutions and virgin soil of our country, infused immediate energy, encouraged immigration, and promoted increase, and its progress has outstripped all calculation, and astonished plodding Europe. Rich in all the material elements of wealth, and richer still in equal and unrestrictive laws, it has realized a better than the fabled Golden Age. For, our pursuits are not purely agricultural, but are most happily diversified, and our time is marked by a wholesome, but intense activity, rather than by the lethargic composure of Saturnian days. So wonderful has been the augmentation of our numbers, that Fiction might almost be excused for transferring hither the Cadmean story, and proclaiming that our exuberant soil, eager to be enjoyed, had given sudden birth to myriads of people, armed and prepared, not for mutual slaughter, but for all peaceful avocations. In Europe, great improvements in arts, or commerce, make epochs, and are centuries apart :- Here they succeed each other unintermittingly; or rather, our sustained, onward march is but an epoch in the world's history. Eastern nations have moved tardily, and laboriously towards power, like hunters scaling the Alps with hesitating and uncertain But our young Republic flew like a victor, to the goal, and grasped the prize at once. Our national existence outruns the alloted span of individual life, but by a single year, and a happy and hopeful people swarm over its vast surface, everywhere developing its limitless resources. Our cities are often, but the growth of yesterday, and so have no timehonored monuments, and present but meagre annals. The few trivial facts concerning them, which posterity will seek to know, when time has dignified them, are yet fresh in the memory of living witnesses.

Buffalo affords one of the most prominent of the many illustrations of these truths, presented by our country. It is emphatically a young city-the offspring of a commerce, which was itself created but five and twenty years ago. About forty-six years since, it first received a name, and took its place upon the maps; but for more than twenty years thereafter, it remained at best, a petty frontier village. Now it ranks high among our chief cities, and is named and known throughout all Europe, and wherever civilization rules or roves .-The proximate causes of its present prosperity are well understood, and the means which must and will be resorted to, to confirm that prosperity, and insure the accomplishment of its high destiny are obvious. But the individual struggles, and the combined efforts of its earlier citizens and friends against foreign and powerful opposing influences-their labors, their sacrifices, and their sufferings in these early contests, which in fact founded Buffalo-the very names of these men, in their connection at least, are, it is feared but imperfectly, and ungratefully remembered, and may soon sink into a most undeserved oblivion. The local and personal details too, which are so important in municipal annals, are fast fading into forgetfulness. The minute events of the last war with Great Britain, involving the then fortunes of our place and citizens-the details of their aggressions, sufferings, and resistance, which ended in the destruction of the village of Buffalo, and the dispersion of its inhabitants-the most interesting details of the progress of its earlier settlement and business, and the history of the reclamation of its soil, and the march of trade, and improvement, may soon be lost to us .-The records of these things are scanty and imperfect, and most of the individuals in whose memory they were stored have left us, or are engrossed in business, or enfeebled by age. Within a few months, two of the oldest, most intelligent, and best informed of our early residents, Mr. Joseph LANDON, and Mrs. MARGARET ST. JOHN, have died, leaving, it is feared, no record of many of these matters which they. and they only, could speak of from actual knowledge. It is no part of our duty, though were it in our power, it would be a pleasure to us in presenting this Directory to the public, to preface it with a minute history of Buffalo. But may we not be excused for calling the attention of our citizens to the fact, that time is rapidly and surely destroying the materials of the most interesting part of such a history, and for urging the adoption of earnest, immediate measures for their recovery and preservation. Few flying years will probably obliterate some of our written, and all our unwritten history,or at least leave the latter dubious and unauthentic. Is not this subject worthy the attention of our Young Men's Association? Ought not it, or some Society, framed for the purpose, to invite contributions of these details, draw them from the recollections of the few survivors of the ancient settlers, amass them from all quarters, and as speedily as practicable, weave them into history, and give them the form and durability of a continuous work?

We have been furnished, by some of our citizens, with some slight materials of this character, and have used them freely, not doubting but that they would give to this hurried sketch its chief interest, and hoping so to diffuse a taste for the collection of materials so necessary to a full account of the rise and progress of our city. We are also largely indebted for matter of moment, to a pamphlet published here in 1825, by S. Ball, entitled "Buffalo in 1825, containing historical and statistical sketches, illustrated with a map of the village, and view of the harbor." We have also drawn upon the Hon. S. Wilkeson's graphic sketches of our harbor history, originally made public in the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, and subsequently republished in the first volume of the American Pioneer.

Buffalo is situated in the county of Erie, and State of New York, in north latitude, 42 deg. 50 min., and west longitude from Greenwich, 79 deg. 22 min. 37 sec., at the eastern extremity of Lake Erie. It lies partly upon that Lake and the Niagara River; but its base, as it were, rests upon the Buffalo Creek or Harbor, the western terminus of the Erie Canal. It is hardly necessary to state that the Erie Canal connects the Atlantic Ocean, through the Hudson River, with the great Lakes of the North, and binds together the eastern seaboard and the Western States, by the strongest ligaments of interest. The commerce between the East and West, is mainly conducted through, and is the chief source of the prosperity of Buffalo.

The creek approaches the lake, and, within the city bounds, is separated from it by a broad, low tongue of land, usually called the peninsula; on the extremity of which stand the ruins of the old beacon, and from which the south, or principal pier, forming the entrance of our harbor, with a substantial stone light-house at its further end, juts out into the The harbor, we regret to say, though one of the best upon our inland waters, and considerably improved within a few years by private enterprise, is hardly adequate to the accommodation of the shipping that now enters it, and cannot suffice for the transaction of the vast commerce which the expanding West must inevitably tender to the East. If the East would reap the immense and inexhaustible fruits of that augmenting commerce-if it would not see it diverted to the South, or drawn abroad to the enrichment of a foreign power-it must prepare for its retention to itself, by co-operating heartily with our citizens, in two great measures:-It must effectually strive, with us, for the enlargement of the main trunk of the Erie Canal, to a capacity sufficient for a hugely augmented business-and it must aid, too, in enforcing upon government the performance of its duty, by the construction of a harbor, worthy of and fit for the reception and protection of the commerce of a full quarter of its territory.

The Eric Canal runs, for some distance in the city, nearly parallel with the creek, or harbor, and is united to it by several cuts, or slips. The low ground between them, once deemed an irreclaimable morass, is densely covered with substantial warehouses and large stores, intermingled with factories, foundries, mechanics' shops, taverns and dwellings. From the Canal, the city rises gently to a height of fifty or sixty feet above the lake, and is beautifully laid out in wide streets, with open spaces and public grounds, though the latter are not so numerous or extensive as would seem desirable. The public buildings, and the churches, though commodious, do not, with some exceptions, evince much taste, nor add to the beauty of the place. The city, however, is well-built, and full of elegant edifices, and noble mansions. The neighboring lake mitigates the rigors of winter, and tempers the extreme heats of summer. Our autumn, too, is prolonged, and delightful; and although spring is brief and variable, the climate is, on the whole, as pleasant and salubrious as that of any other place in the same latitude. We are sorry, for the nonce, that we live here, as that circumstance debars us from the pleasure of speaking our mind of its inhabitants. But this we will say—that no one ever lived in Buffalo, and left it, without regret, and often wishing to return; while many good men who departed from it, and lived in other cities, have come back as joyfully as did the dove to Noah. The ravens, who, at one time, gave it an ill name, flew off long ago, and never returned.

We have connected herewith tabular statements, showing the increase, and improvement, and present state of commerce, the arts, and education, in Buffalo. To these statements we refer the reader. But we cannot resist an inclination to remark, in passing, that nowhere has a more vigorous and effect ve demonstration been made in favor of common schools, a demonstration alike useful and glorious to the city. The schools are under the regulation of the Common Council, are free, and are supported by a general tax upon property within the city, and the legal contributions from the school fund of the State.

The Fire Department is well organized, and sustains a high and deserved reputation for order and efficiency. Fires have, of late years, been rare and unimportant among us; and this exemption from so dread a calamity, must, in the main, be attributed to the energy of the department, which is ever prepared and on the alert, and has, in many instances, prevented extensive conflagrations.

The city is supplied with water by public and private wells, and some reservoirs have been made in the upper part of the city, to be resorted to in case of fire. The streets are now lighted at night. The Corporation have recently set off a lamp district, and it is hoped that a successful trial will result in a proper general system. The Niagara river offers us a boundless supply of the purest water in the world; and the energy and public spirit which have so far been busied about more pressing matters, must soon appropriate it. In five years, if we greatly err not, Buffalo will be as handsomely lighted, and as proud of her water-works, as any city in the Union.

We have not space left for more than the fulfilment of our promise to furnish a brief and meagre outline of the history of our city, and must therefore refer the reader to other portions of this Directory, for a list of the Societies for the promotion of sociality, literature, virtue, active benevolence, and religion, which form our chief stay and ornaments.

At the close of the Revolution, the whole of the western portion of this State, in common with the territory north and west of the Allegany Mountains, was a howling wilderness. The whites had indeed visited it, and had established here and there, along the northern Lakes, small posts for the engrossment and protection of the Indian trade in fors and peltry. Traders and Missionaries had penetrated and roved over its forests, and now and then with a few half-breeds, and degenerate white men had nestled down in the rude abundance of semi-savage life, in the shifting Indian villages, which were usually to be found upon the borders of inland lakes, or upon the streams which flowed into them. A small village of the Seneca Tribe of Ircquois, existed near the mouth of the Buffalo Creek, and was probably won in battle but a short time previous from another aboriginal nation, now extinct.

Lake Erie is named after the Eries, or Cat Indians, who were exterminated, as is said, with the exception of a single individual, by the Senecas, in one decisive battle, which is claimed to have occurred about two hundred years ago, on the banks of the Grand River in Canada. Mr. Ball, in his pamphlet, says: "there are descendants of the person preserved at that time, now living in the Indian village, near this place." But, it is apprehended that the traditions of this war have been permitted to fade away, and we have left, concerning it, but little that can be deemed authentic.

Various traditions concerning the origin of the name of our Creek, are said to have existed in 1825. We have seen but one of them, which states that a party of famished French voyageurs having camped upon the Creek, long before white settlements existed, had horse meat palmed upon them for buffalo, by their hunters, and hence the name. is true that the Indian word for the American Bison is not buffalo. But it seems improbable that the French would give to any place an English appellation. The origin of the name is not a matter of vital moment. But it is perhaps most probable either that the Buffalo did once resort in large numbers to the borders of our stream, or to the mineral waters upon its banks; or that it was named by the first English visitors from finding among the Indians, the skins, or skulls of this animal, the spoils of their frequent hunting, or predatory invasions of the West. It is indeed said that our Sene. cas have no traditions of the buffalo; but their traditions are always too false, too fading, and too uncertain for reliance .-They change with the whims of the narrator, or are varied to meet the expectations of the listener, and seldom outlast a generation. The Buffalo once roamed over the whole northern continent. Its droves crossed and re-crossed the Alleganies, and browsed in the woodlands of the east, as well as cropped the herbage of the prairies of the west. They were seen in large bands on the St. Lawrence, and on the banks of Lake Ontario, by the earlier Missionaries of Acadia.

prietors of the western portion of the State, the Creek is called Te-ho-se-ro-ron, which is supposed to have been intended for an Indian word, but the true Indian name of it is Te-u-shu-wa, or rather, Tu-sha-wa; meaning peeled bass-wood bark. The linden, or basswood is easily stripped of its bark at all seasons, thus yielding the chief material for the construction of the wigwam, and offering a strong aid and inducement to the founding of an Indian village.

The earliest information we possess as to the settlement of Buffalo, is derived from the testimony of Mr. Joseph Lan. pon, in an important trial involving the title to the lands on the Peninsula. He came here to reside in 1806, and kept the Mansion House for many years. He was a land Surveyor by profession, and passed through Buffalo in 1796, on his way to Ohio, with a party of about sixty persons, to survey the Western Reserve. They crossed from Albany to Schenectada, where they built a batteau, and ascended the Mohawk, crossed the portage to Wood Creek, and thence descended to Lake Ontario by water. At that time, the clearings were inconsiderable, and there were but four buildings on the whole of the present site of Buffalo. One was a double log house on or near Exchange street, a little east of Washington street, and was occupied by MARTIN MIDDAUGH, and one Ezektel Lane, his son-in-law, until 1807 or 1808, when Judge BARKER, the father of JACOB A. BARKER, moved into it. Another house was on the corner of Commercial street and the Terrace, where the Sidway block now stands; another one, and the fourth near the site of the Mansion house. One of these seem to have been kept by one JESSE SKIN-NES, as a kind of tavern. The fourth was occupied by Col. ASA RANSOM. Three or at most four families then constituted the whole permanent population; and we have been able to determine them from the best lights as follows: Mrp-DAUGH and LANE were the heads of one, SKINNER of another, and black Joe of the third. Mr. NATHANIEL S. WHITE, an estimable citizen, who was also a witness in the cause referred to, adds that one WINNE was associated in 1796, with JoE, in keeping a petty Indian store. What little we have been able to disinter concerning these first inhabitants we'll state. We are ignorant of the fate of Skinner, who was a person of no note, and of that of WINNE. Black Joe migrated to Cattaraugus, and died there among his Indian customers. LANE also removed to the same place, prior to 1806, and it is said, is now living in this city. He and Min-DAUGH built the house they occupied, which was the first one erected in Buffalo. MARTIN MIDDAUGH, was one of those characters so common among our pioneers. He was a German, and spoke Indian more fluently than English. Poor, but contented, so that he lived easily; he varied his employments greatly. He cleared a little piece of ground across the Creek, nearly opposite the foot of Main street, and raised some corn and potatoes; worked a little as a cooper, and done trifling jobs for the first settlers; hunted, and fished and trapped some, and was a great favorite with the Indians. He occupied his little clearing, by permission of the owners until he died, at an extreme old age, in the winter of 1822,

At the commencement of this century, the tide of emigration began to flow westward, and in 1807, there were about a dozen houses in Buffalo. From that time there was a small but regular increase of the settlement down to the destruction of the place in the last war.

The Holland Company established its office at Batavia and commenced selling its lands, at about the close of the last century; and Buffalo was surveyed and plotted, as the village of New Amsterdam, in 1801. The streets were principally named after the Trustees and Agents of the company; but nearly all the names then given them have been laid aside since 1825. In that year Main street was Willink Avenue, below, and Van Staphorst Avenue above the square of the two churches. Erie street, was Vollenhoven Avenue; Church street, Stadnitski Avenue; Niagara street, Schimmelpenninck Avenue; Court street, Cazenovia Avenue; and Niagara street Busti Avenue. It is certainly not to be regretted that those alterations have been made, and the difficulty of spelling and pronouncing the old names, must exonerate the Councils which discarded them from all suspicion of changing them for the sake of change, or from disrespect to the highly honorable men whose names they were. Exchange was originally named Crow street, after an early set-Tuscarora has become Franklin : Cayuga, Pearl; tler. Onondaga, Washington, and Oneida, Ellicott street; the last change, being a deserved compliment to one of the most intelligent, judicious, and public spirited men of the last generation.

In 1811, Charles Townsend and George Coit, two well-known citizens, came here as traders, bringing about twenty tons of merchandise—a heavy stock for that time—which was boated from Schenectady on the Mohawk river, carried across the short portage to Wood Creek, and thence floated to Oswego and to Lewiston, carted around the Falls to Schlosser, and thence brought in boats up the Niagara river to Buffalo, in all in about four weeks, at a cost of fifty dollars a ton from Albany. The usual cost of transportation by land, from Albany, was eighty dollars a ton. Judge Townsend furnishes the following facts in regard to the village at that early day:—

"In 1811, Buffalo contained less than one hundred dwellings, and a population of some four or five hundred. The only public buildings were, the old store jail on Washington street, and an unfinished wooden court-house. A small wooden building, built and claimed by Dr. C. Chapin, near where Mr. Silas Fobes's dwelling now stands, put up for a school-house, served also as a town hall, a church for all religious denominations, and, indeed, for all public purposes, Three tayerns were kept: one by Mr. Landon, occupying a part of the site of the Mansion House-another, of more moderate pretensions, at the corner of Main and Seneca streets, by Raphael Cook-and the third, by Gamaliel St. John, near the corner of Main and Court streets. The only merchants were Juba Storrs & Co., Grosvenor & Heacock, Eli Hart, and Isaac Davis ; the first being located on the corner of Washington and Exchange streets, and the others on Main, between South Division and Exchange streets. A mail from Albany, brought once or twice a week in a wooden spring lumber wagon, was opened by Oliver Forward, a Justice of the Peace. Judge Granger held the office of Postmaster, and also that of Collector of the Port; the latter an office rather of honor, than of business or profit. The commerce of the lakes was small. I think there were only four or five small vessels on our side, and two or three merchantmen, besides two British armed vessels on the other. There was no barbor here. The mouth of the Buffalo creek was usually so much obstructed by a sand bar, that small vessels could but-rarely enter, and even canoes were sometimes shut out, and footmen walked dry shod across the mouth. Vessels were loaded and unloaded at a wharf, near Bird Island, at Black Rock."

The inhabitants of Buffalo were zealous and efficient in the prosecution of the last war against the adjoining Canadian frontier, and the village itself was a military depot in 1812. It consequently became a prominent object of assault, and was doomed to destruction by the enemy. On the 30th of December, 1813, a large British force, with a horde of Indian auxiliaries, crossed the Niagara river at Black Rock, advanced upon the village, and took and burnt it, notwithstanding the gallant resistance of a portion of the inhabitants, who succeeded in removing and preserving a part of the military stores. Many of our people were carried away captive, and those who escaped, flying as they did in the depth of winter, and stripped of all their property, were scarcely in a more enviable condition. So complete was the destruction of the place, that only two dwellings were left standing; one of which was occupied by Mrs. St. John, and stood near David Buar's store on Main street. The village was in fact utterly destroyed, and its inhabitants completely dispersed.

The village of Buffalo was incorporated by the Legislature in April, 1813, and Eli Hart, Zenas W. Barker, Ebenezer Walden, Oliver Forward, and Cyrenius Chapin, were the trustees nominated by the act. The charter was revised in 1815, and new trustees appointed; but it would seem it was not acted upon until 1816, when it was again revised. A new village charter was granted in 1822, and was amended in 1826. In 1832 it was incorporated as a city, and Dr. Ebenezer Johnson was chosen its first Mayor.

The inhabitants did not, it is said, commence rebuilding Buffalo, until after the close of the war in 1815. They were, for the time, at least, disappointed in their just expectations of remuneration from the Federal Government, for their property destroyed by the enemy; and the village languished, and its increase was slow, until 1822, when the effectual prosecution of the Eric Canal revived their hopes, and gave the first impulse to Buffalo. From that time to the present, it has advanced rapidly and steadily, through all the opposition it has experienced from opposing interests, despite the fluctuations of the currency, and the bursting of huge speculative bubbles, to the high place it occupies in the list of American cities.

In 1825, according to Mr. Ball's pamphlet, the village was gaining rapidly under the beneficial influences of the certain construction of the Erie Canal. It may amuse us now, to learn that this great city was then capable, in his opinion, at least, of receiving "an additional start" from the remuneration by Government, of the citizens for their war losses, "together with the revival of the Bank of Niagara, and the establishment of an Insurance Office, with a large surplus capital." He informs us that the village contained between 400 and 500 buildings, including dwelling-houses, stores, and mechanics' shops, and states that, according to the census of the preceding January, it had 2,412 inhabitants—and announces, with an air of triumph, that this is 317 more than the whole township of Buffalo including the village of Black Rock, contained in 1820, according to the census of that year—and that Black Rock contains 1,039 inhabitants.

This curious pamphlet contains details of much interest, from which we venture to draw largely. It enumerates among the population, four clergymen, seventeen attornies, and nine physicians; and the mechanics and artizans, and their hands, are set down as follows:—3 printers, employing 10 hands; 2 book-binders, 4 do.; 4 goldsmiths, 3 do.; 3 tin and copper smiths, 16 do.; 7 blacksmiths, 17 do.; 2 cabinet makers, 10 do.; 3 wheelwrights and coach builders, 10 do.; 2 chair-makers, 5 do.; 1 cooper, 3 do.; 3 hatters, 8 do.; 2 tanners and curriers, 9 do.; 5 boot and shoe makers, 35 do.; 2 painters, 5 do.; 4 tailors, 20 do.; 1 manufacturer of tobacco, 2 do.; and 51 carpenters and joiners, 19 masons and stone-cutters, 3 butchers, and 1 brush maker. It states, as singular, the fact, that there was not a gunsmith, or a shipwright, in the place.

"There are 26 dry goods stores, 36 groceries, 3 hat stores, 7 clothing do., 4 druggist do., 1 hardware do., 6 shoe do., 1 looking glass do., 3 jewelry do., 3 printing offices, 2 bookstores and binderies, 11 houses of public entertainment, 1 ropewalk, 3 tanneries, 1 brewery, 1 livery stable, 8 storehouses, 1 custom house, 1 reading room, 1 post office, 1 public library, 1 masonic hall, and a theatre, situated on lot

No. 15, which has been conducted during the past year with a considerable degree of ability."

The public buildings are all honorably mentioned. consisted of the brick Court House, "a very handsome designed building, but remains unfinished." A stone Goal, a Market House, situated at the head of Stadnitski Avenue, (Church street,)-the Niagara Bank, described as a large and elegant brick building, situated on North Onondaga, between Swan and Eagle streets, but which our readers will probably recognize as an old fashioned edifice, closing North Division, between Washington and Ellicott streetsthe Buffalo Insurance office-an Episcopal Church-a Presbyterian Meeting House, and a convenient Methodist Chapel. The schools were, "one Young Ladies; one Young Gentleman's Academy, and four Common Schools." There were five religious Congregations, distributed among the Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists, and Universalists, and four weekly newspapers. The Buffalo Patriot, established in 1811; the Buffalo Journal, in 1818; the Gospel Advocate, in 1823; and the Buffalo Emporium, in 1824. In praising the market he adds: "it may not be unworthy of remark that the value of wheat is not known here. nor is there even a bushel offered for sale; this is undoubtedly occasioned by the want of mills, or streams to set them upon, there being none within a less distance than eleven miles."

The author does not view with favor the old Light-house. He says "the light is elevated about thirty feet above the ordinary Lake level, but is of no great use to mariners, in consequence of the smoke and mists of the village, settling along the margin of the waters, just above the elevation of the lantern, which almost totally obscures the light, except when so near as to see it beneath, or at so great a distance that it may be seen over the vapor. A private light is fixed at the pier head, for the use of the Steamboat, and when lighted, can be seen when that of the Light House remains in perfect obscurity."

Of our Commerce and Marine the following are the statistics for 1824-5. The shipping belonging to the Port of Buffalo, was upwards of 1050 tons; consisting of one Steamboat, elsewhere called the Steam brig Superior, of 346 tons burthen; one hermaphrodite brig, eight schooners, one sloop, and four transportation boats, averaging over twenty-five tons each, besides a Steam Ferry Boat, which was to commence running in July then next, between Buffalo and Fort Erie. There were upwards of sixty sail of good, substantial, and safe vessels, owned upon the Lake; forty-two of which entered Buffalo in 1824; and there were that season 286 arrivals, and as many clearances. It is proclaimed exultingly that the Superior, "whose accommodations have not been surpassed, makes a trip to Detroit, a distance of nearly three hundred miles, every eight or nine days; and it is rare that a day passes during the season without the arrival or departure of some of the Lake vessels, which generally have good accommodations for passengers, and are well found."

But we must cease extracting from this pamphlet, which, though a thing of yesterday, seems of a remote antiquity; all things mentioned in it are changed so marvelously for the better. So may it be with this most modest sketch, ere twenty more years shall have slipped away! Certainly, Buffalo has taken vast strides since 1825. According to the census, her population, in 1825, was, as before given, 2,412. In 1830, it was 8,668. In 1835, 15,661. For the next five years, she struggled bravely under a concurrence of adverse circumstances, prostrating the business and destroying the credit of the country, but added to her numbers, and had in 1840, 18,213 inhabitants. In 1845, our population was 29,773; and, judging from our apparent increase, we hazard little in predicting that, in 1850, we will number nearly 50,000 souls. Our commerce has expanded prodigiously, and there would seem to be no limit to its future growth. But let us not imagine that this palmy state was easily attained. Could we realize but a thousandth part of the great hazards incurred, the contumely sustained, and labors endured by the first efficient advocates of the Erie Canal, we would banish all such mistaken notions. Nor was the destiny of Buffalo necessarily determined by the commencement of that great The great question of its western termination remained to be decided-and the decision of that question depended upon the solution of another-whether a harbor could be formed at Buffalo. It may seem strange to some of us, that such a doubt could have arisen. But when we recur to the fact, that the mouth of Buffalo creek was closed by a sand-bar, which footmen often walked over dry shod, and that there was no instance of a permanent entrance for vessels having been effected by artificial means, in any similar stream, we will not wonder that it was seriously entertained, and must admit that on the effectual demonstration of its fallacy, properly depended the then fate of our city. A mighty influence, in and out of the Canal Board, demanded that Black Rock should be the exclusive terminus; and it enjoyed a natural harbor, a strong and evident argument in its favor, which could be overcome only by actual proof of the ability of Buffalo to supply an ample artificial one. And this proof was furnished by the indefatigable labors of a few individuals, sustained by the public spirit of citizens of our then small village.

The history of that great crisis is contained in the papers of Judge Wilkeson, before referred to. The narrative is most instructive, and is delivered with such clearness and effectivess, that we had nearly determined to abstain from doing more than inviting public attention to it. But these papers are not generally accessible, and are too long for a full insertion. We will not mar, by endeavoring to compress them into a smaller compass; but will briefly allude to some of the main features of the recital.

In April, 1818, at the instance of citizens of Buffalo, an Act of the Legislature was passed, authorizing a survey of the Creek at the expense of the county of Niagara, which then embraced it, with reference to determining the feasibility of constructing a harbor, and WILLIAM PEACOCK made the survey in the following summer, gratuitously. Although the report was favorable, neither the General Government nor the State would assume the work. But the latter, in 1819, by law agreed to loan $12,000 for its construction, on being secured by bond and mortgage for its re-payment .-OLIVER FORWARD, CHARLES TOWNSEND, GEORGE COIT, and SAMUEL WILKESON, gave the requisite security in the fore part of 1820, and the pier was forthwith commenced .-It was prosecuted and finished, under the superintendence of Judge Wilkeson, in 1821, in 221 working days, and extended into the lake for about eighty rods, into twelve feet water. Every person in the place seems to have been agitated by, and to have participated in the projected improvement, and it was carried forward earnestly and with that rare determination which bends to no adverse circumstances, and always wins success or glory. Discouragement clustered around them in vain. It seems marvellous that such an undertaking was persevered in amid the jeers of neighbors, and the buffets of adversity, by the people of an inconsiderable town, who were not aided by experience, nor stimulated by the eve of general observation. The narrative is worthy of De Foe. Their make-shifts and substitutes for the unattainable machinery they needed were most ingenious. And, though they encoutered gravel, where sand only was supposed to be, and storms often jeopardized, and sometimes nearly destroyed their labors, they were not to be deterred. And when all seemed successfully completed, the first steamboat of the lakes, the Walk-in-the-Water, having been lost, and her owners having determined to build the second-the old Superior,-the building of it was nearly secured to Black Rock, and lost to Buffalo, and was gained for the latter only by the giving of a stringent judgment bond by nearly all its responsible citizens, conditioned to pay to the steam-boat company one hundred and fifty dollars for every day's detention of the boat in the creek, after the first of May, by harbor obstruction. The boat was built in our creek in 1822, and ready to enter the lake in the spring of 1823. The completion of the harbor, such as it was, had given force to the general considerations in favor of continuing the canal to Buffalo, and the decision of the canal board to that effect, was published in the report of 1823, to the great joy of its care-worn and anxious inhabitants. But their joy was damped, and they suddenly summoned to a renewal of their labors. The spring freshet, which was to perfect the harbor entrance, by expelling all obstructions, and so give egress to the Superior, encountered a huge body of anchored ice, and being repelled by it, formed an eddy, and whirled large beds of sand and gravel into the channel, reducing its depth to three feet and a half for a full hundred yards. And yet on the first day of May the voluntary subscriptions, and exertions of the citizens had re-opened it, and the Superior floated through into the lake ; the bond was cancelled, and the title of Buffalo to consideration, as the future great city of the lakes, first established.

The pier thus made, with the old light house, are shown in the view of Buffalo harbor, copied into this Directory, frem Ball's pamphlet. They have long since been replaced by others, built by the General Government.

Our city is rapidly advancing, and to many it may seem as though greatness was her inevitable portion, and with due effort, it must be. But the history of our past,—of that day of what now seem small things,—if properly considered, furnishes impressive lessons for our conduct, in the prosperous and flattering present time. By indifference, mere self-seeking, and inactivity, naught can be gained, and something may be lost. But, if we unitedly bring into action the energy, determination, intelligence, and public zeal, which marked the Buffalonians of those times, our city will be refounded on adamant, and defy all competition forever.

NOTICES OF EARLY TRAVELLERS.

The earliest notice of the present site of Buffalo, may be found in the travels of the Baron La Hontan. He ascended the Niagara into Lake Eric on the 15th day of August, 1687, more than one hundred years prior to the first settlement of our city. He advised the French Government to build a Fort at this place, which, in anticipation of its construction, he calls by the name of "Fort Suppose," on the map accompanying his "Travels." This fort was intended as a check against the neighboring Iroquois and Senecas.

In the month of March 1791, Colonel Thomas Proctor, United States Commissioner, visited Buffalo Creek for the purpose of persuading some of the most influential of the Seneca Chiefs to accompany him on an embassy of peace to the hostile Indians residing near the western extremity of Lake Erie. He remained at and near this place from the 29th of April to the 21st of May in that year; during which time he kindled a council fire, and through the intervention of "the Elders of the Indian women," obtained the desired consent of the Senecas. The project was defeated however by the refusal of Colonel Gordon, the Kings commandant at Niagara, to furnish a vessel for their passage to Sandusky.

RED JACKET, FARMERS BROTHER, Capt. SNAKE, Capt. O'BEEL and Young King, were the most conspicuous among the Chiefs. Young King figured in the regimentals of a British Colonel, "red, faced with blue," including "a pair of the best epauletts," which fully accounted for the hostility he manifested against the interests of the United States.

When Colonel Proctor approached the Council House, on his first arrival, the Indians, having assembled to meet him, "fired a two pounder swivel gun" which "had been loaded with an uncommon charge." The person who fired it, being aware of this, prudently stood within the house and discharged the gun with a long stick thrust through a chink between the logs.

The recoil of the piece upset it entirely, fixtures and all.— This was done, as Red Jacket observed, in honor of the commissioner's safe arrival, for which they were thankful to the Great Keeper.

Col. PROCTOR mentions a store house at "Lake Erie," (the name by which this point was then known,) kept by one Cornelius Winney, who appears to have been an Indian trader, residing here at that early day. He notices no other buildings. Winney's house was located on the north side of the little Buffalo creek, near the Washington street bridge, and was probably the first building erected at this place.

La Rochefoucauld Liancourt, a French nobleman, visited this place, and the neighboring Seneca village, in the month of June, 1795. The following is translated from the account he published of his travels:

"We were desirous of seeing a large Indian settlement, and as Buffalo creek had been mentioned as the most considerable within our reach, we left the direct path-to Lake Erie, and took one leading to that point much worse than any we had before travelled.

"The Indian village of Buffalo, situated four miles from Lake Eric, is inhabited by the Senecas.

"The Chief of that nation, is Farmers Brother, a great Statesman and Warrior. We had been assured that we should find a collection of eighty houses, but we did not see more than forty. The remainder were scattered along the creek for many miles. Those we saw were situated on very fertile plains, judging from the herbage they produced.

"The road between this place and Lake Erie passes through beautiful groves of beech and hemlock, but is as bad as any as we have found. The whole country is filled with miry and pestilential swamps. We have not seen any fevers among the Indians, as they are less subject to them than the whites.

"We at length arrived at the Post on Lake Erie, which is a small collection of four or five houses, built about a quarter of a mile from the Lake. In order to reach them we were obliged to cross a creek which we found miry enough. The traveller never risks the ford on horseback. He unsaddles his horse and crosses the creek, which is about forty feet wide, in a canoe, first driving his horse into the water, which draws himself through with great difficulty.

"We met some Indians on the road and two or three companies of whites. These encounters gave us great pleasure. In this vast wilderness, a fire is still burning; the vestiges of a camp; the remains of some utensil which has served a traveller, excite sensasions truly agreeable, and which arise only in these immense solitudes.

"We arrived late at the inn, and after a very indifferent supper, were obliged to lie on the floor in our clothes. There was literally nothing in the house, neither furniture, rum, candles nor milk. After much trouble the milk was procured from the neighbors, who were not as accommodating in the way of the rum and candles. At length some arriving from the other side of the river, we seasoned our supper, as usual, with an appetite that seldom failed, and after passing a very comfortable evening, slept as soundly as we had done in the woods.

"Every thing at Lake Erie, (by which name this collection of houses is called,) is dearer than at any other place we visited, for the simple reason that there is no direct communication with any other point. Some were sick with fever in almost every house.

"The next morning Mr. De'Blacons and myself walked about three miles from the tavern, to the place where the river is crossed. Du Petit Thouars hired a canoe to descend to the same point by water. This river, which bears the name of Niagara, is the outlet of Lake Erie, and at this place is about three fourths of a mile wide. Here we embarked and left the territory of the United States."—Voyage dans les Etats Unis.—vol. 1, p. 298.

ISAAC WELD, Jr., an intelligent English traveller, made the tour of the United States in the year 1795, 1796, and 1797.

After visiting the Falls of Niagara, of the appearance of which at that early day, he gives a minute and interesting account, he arrived at Fort Erie in October 1796, intending to embark for Fort Malden in one of the "Kings Ships."

He describes Fort Erie as "a small stockaded post, adjoining which are extensive stores, and about half a dozen miserable little dwellings." Three vessels of war, of about 200 tons burden, and carrying from eight to twelve guns each, besides two or three merchantmen, lay wind-bound, opposite the fort. Fearing he should be famished if he remained on shore under the auspices of "old mother Palmer," his landlady, Mr. Weld took refuge in one of these vessels.

While waiting for a fair wind, he amused himself in making excursions in the neighborhood of the Fort. The following is his description of a visit he made to Buffalo Creek:—

"The Seneka is one of the six nations which formerly bore the general name of the Iroquois Indians. Their principal village is situated on Buffalo Creek, which falls into the eastern extremity of Lake Erie, on the New York shore. We took the ship's boat one morning, and went over to visit it, but all the Indians, men, women, and children, amounting in all to upwards of six hundred persons, had, at an early hour, gone down to Fort Niagara, to partake of a feast which was there prepared for them. We walked about in the neighborhood of the village, dined on the grass on some cold provisions that we had taken with us, and in the evening returned.

"Opposite to the mouth of Buffalo Creek, there is a very dangerous sand bar, which at times it is totally impossible to pass in any other vessels than bateaux; we found it no easy matter to get over it in the ship's long boat with four oars, on going into the creek; and in returning the passage was really tremenduous. The wind, which was westerly, and of course impelled the vast body of water in the lake towards the mouth of the creek, had increased considerably whilst we had been on shore, and the waves had begun to break with such fury over the bar, that it was not without a considerable share of terror that we contemplated the prospect of passing through them; the commodore of the King's ships on the lake, who was at the helm, was determined, however, to cross the bar that night, and accordingly, a strict silence having been enjoined, that the crew might hear his orders, we boldly entered into the midst of the breakers: the boat now rolled about in a most alarming manner; sometimes it mounted into the air on the top of the mighty billows, at other times it came thumping down with prodigious force on the bar; at last it stuck quite fast in the sand; neither oars nor rudder were any longer of use, and for a moment we gave ourselves over for lost; the waves that rolled towards us broke on all sides with a noise like that of thunder, and we were expecting that the boat would be overwhelmed by some one or other of them every instant, when luckily a large wave, that rolled on a little farther than the rest without breaking into foam, set us again affoat, and the oarsmen making at that moment the most vigorous exertions, we once more got into deep water; it was not, however, until after many minutes that we were safely out of the tremendous surf. A boat, with a pair of oars only, that attempted to follow us, was overwhelmed in an instant by a wave which broke over her: it was in vain to think of attempting to give any assistance to her crew, and we were obliged for a time to endure the painful thought that they might be struggling with death within a few yards of us; but before we lost sight of the shore we had the satisfaction of beholding them all standing in safety on the beach, which they had reached by swimming."

The next traveller who notices Buffalo, is John Melish. He reached this place at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of the 27th of October, 1811; he says

"Buffalo is handsomely situated at the east end of Lake Erie, where it commands a beautiful view of the Lake, of Upper Canada, and Fort Erie, and a great distance to the southward, which is terminated by an elevated lofty country. The site of the town extends quite to the lake shore, but is principally built on an eminence of about 30 feet, at a little distance; and to the south along the creek are handsome rich bottom lots, which are at present a little marshy, but will when drained, be most valuable appendages to this beautiful place.

" BUFFALO was laid out for a town about 5 years ago, and is regularly disposed in streets and lots. The lots are from 60 to 100 feet deep, and sell from 25 to 50 dollars; and there are out lots of 5 and 10 acres, worth at present from 10 to 25 dollars per acre. The population was by last census 365; it is now computed at 500, and is rapidly increasing.

"The buildings are mostly of wood, painted white; but there is a number of good brick houses, and some few of stone. There are four taverns, eight stores, two schools, and a weekly newspaper has been recently established.

The town is as yet too new for the introduction of any manufactures, except those of the domestic kind.

greater part of the people are farmers and mechanics. "The settlers are mostly from New England, but the town being on the great thoroughfare to the western country, there is a general mixture. A considerable trade is constantly kept up by the influx and reflux of strangers, and such articles as are necessary, for their accommodation are dear. House rent is from 2 to 20 dollars per week; wood is one dollar per cord flour is 7 dollars per barrel; pork 6 dollars per cwt;

beef 4 dollars; porter 6 dollars per dozen. Fish are very plenty and cheap. Boarding is about 3 dollars per week.

"The situation is quite healthy, and the seasons are much more mild and open than might be expected in this northern latitude.

"Buffalo Creek flows into the lake by a slow current. It is navigable about four miles, and it is proposed to run a pier into the lake at its outlet, and form a harbor, which would be a most important advantage to this part of the country.

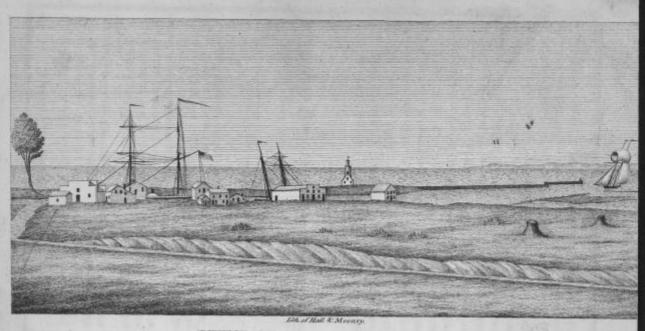

"Already there is a turnpike road to New York, having the accommodation of a stage three times a week. Upon the whole I think this is likely to becom a greate settlement."

—Melish's Travels, vol. 2, p. 312.

DESCRIPTION OF THE ## VIEW OF BUFFALO HARBOR IN 1825.

The accompanying view is a lithographic copy of a plate to be found in a small pamphlet published by the late Sheldon Ball, in June, 1825. The view was taken from the Terrace, near the northerly entrance to the market—then a high bank, with the green turf upon it unbroken. The foreground exhibits the Eric Canal, then in an unfinished state, from a point near the line of Eric street to the Little Buffalo Creek, above the Commercial street bridge; thence the bed of the Little Buffalo Creek, since converted into the Canal Basin, to the Big Buffalo Creek, which then, as now, for med our Harbor. At the left is seen the point on which, soon afterwards, was erected the warehouse now occupied by Joy & Webster. The tree on the south side of the Creek long since disappeared. The small building at the extreme left, stood in Prime street. The next is "the old red warehouse," occupied by Townsend & Coit; and below it, two buildings standing in and near the foot of Commercial street. these have been removed by the extension of Commercial street, and to make room for the substantial building on the east side of Commercial street, occupied by J. H. Hooker & Co. Farther down the Harbor, we come to a cluster of small buildings, then standing on the Johnson & Wilkeson lot, and extending from the west side of Commercial street to the present Sidway buildings. These were removed in the summer of 1825, to give place to the large wooden warehouse which was destroyed by fire in the winter of 1845. A brick "shanty" now covers the ground, occupied by numberless tenants. Next, and near the centre, stands the warehouse then occupied by the late Hiram Pratt, and our townsman, Asa B. Meech. This building is now standing, nearly unchanged in its exterior, and is the second building below Dock street, occupied by Robinson & Co. It is the only building represented on the plate, that is now standing. The next and last building on the right, was a small warehouse used by S. Thompson & Co., for the Buffalo branch of their extensive business-their main house then being at the rival village of Black Rock. It stood upon the lot now occupied by Gen'l Reed's lower warehouse.

Between the Canal and the buildings lies an open field, embracing the southerly parts of outer lots Nos. 1 and 2—the former owned by the late venerable and esteemed Louis LeCoutculx, and the latter by the late Benjamin Ellicott, of Batavia. The stumps of two large sycamores are seen on the right.

In the Harbor, at the foot of Commercial street, lies the steam brig Superior—then the only steamer afloat on all the great chain of Lakes above the Falls of Niagara. She was of 346 tons burthen, and, as will be seen by her rig, relied much on her sails; with the help of which she accomplished a trip to Detroit and back once in eight or nine days. solitary schooner lies at Pratt & Meech's dock : another is entering the Harbor, and these embrace the total shipping in port. The old light-house is shown on the south bank of the Creek, near the junction of pier and sea-wall. Its foundations yet remain, although it has long since ceased to be used. Beyond is seen the Buffalo pier-a particular account of the construction of which will be found in another part of this work. At the end is a private light for the use of the steam brig. The lower pier, extending across the original bed of the Creek, and across the sand-bank to the Lake, and thus forming, with the main pier, a new channel, which is the present entrance to the Harbor, is also exhibited. In the distance is seen Point Abino and the Canada shore, and the boundless waste of sky and water. It may seem incredible to the thousands who daily traverse the docks and the streets in the lower part of our city, that this plate is a correct representation of the appearance of the Harbor in 1825, vet there are many of our citizens who will recognize the truthfulness and vigor of the sketch in all its essential features.

YOUNG MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

The Young Men's Association is an institution of a Literary and Scientific character, and was established by the young men of this city in the winter of 1835 and '36, and subsequently incorporated by an Act of the Legislature passed

March 3, 1843.

Founded at a period of unparalleled prosperity, the management of its affairs partook of the character of the times. Its revenues were anticipated in the purchase of books, and its reading room was supplied with two newspapers from each State in the Union, with very many from the larger cities and the Lake towns. A large debt was consequently created which, at one time, threatened the existence of the institution itself; but a rigid system of economy and the extraordinary exertions of successive executive committees, had in a great degree mitigated the evil, and the committee of 1845 had the satisfaction of reporting to the association at the close of their term that they had extinguished the balance of the debt.

During the past year the affairs of the institution have been ably managed though the drafts previously made upon the liberality of our citizens prevented the realization of funds from other sources than the yearly dues of its members, which are at present little more than sufficient to defray its current expenses and prevent the depreciation in value of the Library consequent upon its use.

The Library comprising many rare and valuable works numbers about 5000 volumes and is gradually increasing. It is open to members from 9 A. M. to 12 M. From 2 to 5 P. M. and from 61 to 9 P. M.

The Reading Room is supplied with all the daily city newspapers and many from the principal cities of the Union together with the ablest American and Foreign quarterly and monthly periodicals. It is open every week-day from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. to members and strangers introduced by members, the latter being entitled to its free use for one month from their introduction.

Lectures-Literary and scientific are maintained during the winter months.

The affairs of the institution are managed by an Executive Committee, consisting of the President, three Vice Presidents, a Corresponding and Recording Secretary, Treasurer and a board of ten managers who are elected annually. The library is in charge of a Librarian appointed by the Executive Committee.

Terms of Membership-Initiation Fee $1,00; Annual Dues $3,00, payable semi-annually in advance.

The following gentlemen compose the Executive Committee for the present year:

Thos. C. Welch, President.

James L. Butler, 1st Vice President.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE.

There are two Societies of this Order in the city, called Divisions, chartered by the Grand division of the State of New York. The first is Buffalo Division, No. 33, instituted April 6th, 1844, by Mr. Edmunds, of New York. The second, Lake Erie Division, No. 94; instituted by Mr. Cyrus P. Lee, of this city, Jan. 1st, 1846. This Institution adopts the Tetotal Pledge from all intoxicating liquors, and pays its members when sick, $4,00 per week. Upon the decease of a brother, his family receives $25,00; and at the decease of a brother's wife $20,00. Its affairs are in a prosperous condition, and the "Sons" are steadily increasing in numbers. The meetings of the Lake Erie Division are held on Monday evenings, and those of the Buffalo Division every Wednesday evening at their Hall, over 274 Main street, Kremlin Block.

Having greatly increased our facilities for manufacturing during the past season, by the erection of an extensive Mill and procuring for it the most modern style of machinery, we are enabled to compete successfully with any establishment in the Union. We have been induced by the increasing demand for paper at the West and Canada, to establish a Ware House in this City, for the sale of Paper and purchase of Rags, thereby giving the consumer of Paper in Buffalo and the West, the same advantages as though our Mills were situated here. We shall keep constantly on hand a full assortment of

and all other Papers which will be sold for cash at Mill prices, or exchanged for Rage on the most favorable terms.

Paper of Special Sizes or Qualities, made to order on short Notice.

IF Mr. O. L. Teurt, who has been with us in Rochester, for some years, will give his attention to this department of our business. If As we have the Agency of some of the best manufactories in New England, we shall be able to fill all orders made upon us with promptness, and in a manner satisfactory to all.

N. B.—The highest Market price paid in cash at all times, for Rags. Peculiar inducements offered to those wishing to exchange Rags for Paper.

GOTHIC HALL,

There is not a more common error of self deception, than a habit of considering our stations in life so ill spited to our powers, as to be unworthy of calling out a full and proper exercise of our virtues and talents. As society is constituted, there cannot be immy employments which demand very brilliant talents, or exquisite delicacy of taste for their propper discharge. At the same time the universal good depands that those with whom nature has endowed, should be called from the ordinary track to take up the higher and more ennobling duties, and one of the great secrets of advancing in life is to be ready to take advantage of those opportunities, which, if a man really possesses the proper qualifications are sure to present theniselves sometime or other. As the poet expresses it, "There is a tide in the affairs of men," - an abbing and flowing of the uestable element on which they are borne,—and if this be only "taken at the flood," the "full son" is gained, on which "the voyage of their life," may be usade with case and the pros-pect of a happy issue. Thus it is in the case of the Proprietor of Guthie Hall, and notwithstanding it is his duty to remind the public that the

LOW PRICE SYSTEM.

which now enables the community to obtain Clothing of every description, at immense relactions from the enormous and extravagantly high rates of old, was introduced by him, he is precluded from more than hinting at the fact, from an assurance that the advice of the poet, who says

"'Tis well to garner up the good men do," ' has not been lost sight of, and that to this one feature, as well as to the

Quality of the Articles,

he has constantly kept on hand, may be attributed the whole secret of his immesse and unparallelled success. And here he would take occasion to return his warm und heartfelt thanks to the numerous patrons of
